From THURSDAY July 13th, to MONDAY July 20th, 1747.

Mr. Timothy,

Happening a few Days ago (at a Friend's) accidentially to fall on a News-Paper, called the UNIVERSAL SPECTATOR, I was not a little surprized to find in it the following Letter and Mr. Spectator's Notes: The Case of the Lady who wrote it being exactly mine, I beg you'll insert it in your next, and perhaps you may be a Means of reclaiming mine and some other Husbands; in which Case you shall have your Reward. — At the same Time, permit me to advise a young Lady, whose Fondness for Novelty has driven her into many Extravagancies, to enter into a careful and strict Examination of the Qualifications of the Man she loves and seems to design for her Husband, lest a Disappointment in her sanguine Expectations make her as miserable as

Yours, &c.

E——— ———.

The treacherous Husband.

SIR,

I HAVE a Complaint to make of a Wrong, which if it is in any one's Power it is in yours only to redress: It is of the Perfidy of a Husband who abuses my Bed, but in such a Manner that my Life is grown a Burthen, and I am become the most miserable of Women: I am confident no Wife that has the least Love for her Husband cou'd, without the utmost Concern, even hear of his Falsehood; yet Prudence might so far direct her, that if she had not undoubted Proofs of his Treachery to keep her Suspicions and Discontent within her own Bosom: Gallantry among the Men is at present so fashionable, that a Breach of the most sacred Tie is accounted no Crime: But the Perfidy and Imprudence of the Man of whom I complain can have no Colour of such Pretence to justify his base Proceedings. Intrigue and the Pursuit of Women, either in an equal Station as myself, or even of an equal Beauty, with Reluctance I would attribute to the Mode of the Age; but how can I account for his abusing me with my own Servant-Maids but by the natural Viciousness of his Temper? Mr. Spec. there is not a Servant I can take into my House but he'll either frighten 'em away with his Attempt to ruin them, or keep 'em as his Mistresses under my Nose: You may be assur'd that I spend my Life miserable enough, for I have not Power enough to discharge them; and tho' he is complaisant to these mean worthless Wretches he is a perfect Tyrant over me: Nor is it his Tyranny only that I am borne down with; but the very Wenches with whom he has his Amours take upon 'em all the insolent Airs they can shew; with a saucy Impertinence they reply to whatever I ask or whatever I order them to do. The other Day I bid the Impudent Baggage, who lives with me at present, perform some necessary Business of the Family, which she absolutely denied, and on my speaking somewhat rough to her, she told me she wou'd not bear it but tell her Master of the ill Usage I gave her. I will not enumerate any more out of the thousand and thousand Circumstances I could mention. You may guess at my Misfortunes, Who am, &c.

The Condition of this Lady (says Mr. Spectator) is truly melancholy, and the Treatment of her Husband carries with it such a Mixture of Folly and Barbarity, that I know not in what Manner to write that it may have a proper Effect on his Temper: I suppose he is, or thinks he is, a Man of Wit and Gallantry; but let me tell him it' is but a dirty Kind of Taste, to long to drink out of an Hospital Black Jack or a Bedlam Horn of small Beer, when a Venice Glass of neat Wine is set before him: I hope, on due Consideration, he will alter his Conduct, lest his Folly should be parallel to a silly whimsical Lord's, who cut down a fair flourishing Tree that bore delicious Fruit, only to plant a Crab Stump in its Room. I wou'd have this Gentleman consider, before he falls more severely under my Censure, that to continue such a sordid Slave to his Passion is to degrade his Creation into the Scale with that of Beasts, who are hurry'd only by their brutal Sense and Appetite, with Exclusion both of Judgment and Reason.

A short account of the republick of Genoa.

GENOA is a very considerable and remarkable city; for being situated on the side of a hill, on the coast of the Mediterranean, it makes makes a very fine appearance to the ſea, and affords a very pleaſant proſpect both ways; being alſo the capital of a large territory, the ſeat of the ſenate and doge, and an archiepiſcopal ſee; it makes a conſiderable figure among the cities of Italy, and is uſually ſtiled Genoa the ſtately. It is alſo of note for the emperor Charles the VIth landing in its ſuburbs at St. Petro d'Arena, on October 8, N.S. 1711, in his return from Barcelona, where he had been ſince 1705. But as it is pleaſantly ſituated, ſo it is much expoſed to the attacks of any enemy, and remarkable for having ſuffered much from them, viz.

1. From the Carthaginians under Mago, who ſacked it,

2. From the Arabs in 955, who burnt it, and killed or carried away all the inhabitants;

And laſtly, by the French in 1684, who bombarded it and forced the doge to aſk pardon on his knee at Verſailles for the affront which was given.

There is alſo a very hard ſaying of it, viz. That here are mountains without graſs, Seas without fiſh, women without ſhame, and men without faith.

LONDON, April 25.

The laſt Letters which the Miniſter from Genoa at the Hague received from thence, dated April 21, N.S. relate what follows, viz. "That General Schulembergh had made freſh Propoſitions to the Revolters, which they had abſolutely rejected; the Purport of which were, that if they would lay down their Arms, and ſubmit to the Clemency of the Empreſs Queen, without putting themſelves under the Guaranty and Protection of the Crowns of Great-Britain and Sardinia, the Republick would have much more eaſy Terms granted, and would be treated a thouſand times more favourably than it could reaſonably hope for by Force of Arms? That to theſe Propoſitions the Heads of the Revolters made the following Anſwer, "We have already to our unſpeakable Misfortune, too ſeverely felt the fatal Effects of Auſtrian Clemency, to be ever weak enough to truſt to it again. If Count Schulembergh has, as to intimidate us we are told, an Army of 30,000 choſen Troops, and a large Train of Artillery ready, to make us feel the Reſentment of the Empreſs Queen; we ſay in Anſwer to this, that the Republick has 54,000 Men in Arms, 9000 of whom regular Troops, 260 Pieces of Cannon, and 34 Mortars, together with Ammunition and Proviſions in abundance, and what is ſtill more, we are abſolutely determined to defend our City, and preſerve our Liberty, to the laſt Drop of our Blood, and will ſuffer ourſelves to be buried in the Ruins of our Capital, rather than aſk for Quarter and ſubmit to the Clemency of the Court of Vienna, unleſs we can obtain it by an honourable Capitulation, well guarantied by the Kings of Great-Britain and Sardinia, and the Republicks of Venice and the United Provinces."
